Summer in the City!

This summer, Long Island University’s Brooklyn Campus offers you the opportunity to live in the heart of New York City, while earning college credit. What better place to learn about glasswork, hone your skills as a jazz musician, experiment in urban dance technique or explore the world of photography than in the arts and cultural capital of the world?

Course Descriptions:

Jazz Studies - A look at jazz music beginning with its African roots and New Orleans jazz, tracing its evolution through to modern jazz and its influence on contemporary composers. In addition to jazz history, students will be able to work with a master instructor to examine specific technical skills necessary to perform in a jazz ensemble. From individual instruction to ensemble work, students will immerse themselves in the jazz genre. Participants also will have the opportunity to visit jazz clubs throughout the New York City area. (Previous instruction required in: voice, rhythm, woodwinds or brass)

Urban Glass Workshop - Enter the unique world of glasswork in this exciting introduction to molten glass. Learn to sculpt glass into beautiful objects. Create vases and jewelry, and execute individual designs. Professional instruction and plenty of hands-on work will help you to explore this fascinating medium of art. The course will cover: glassblowing, torch working and cold working. Participants also will visit area museums and other glass facilities. (No prior experience necessary!)

Urban Dance: Monstah Black NYC Street and Club Dance - This unique urban dance program will allow students to learn and to perform dance styles inspired by the New York City streets and clubs. Learn Pop Locking, Vogueing, Funky Jazz and Funk. All skill levels are welcome for this fun-filled program.

Digital Photography - An intensive workshop in photographic digital imaging and print output that provides participants with advanced skills in digital fine art and archival print applications. The focus is on advanced digital photographic camera skills and digital print output using alternative and archival media methods. Participants will create a digital portfolio and will compose personal artistic statements on themes inspired by New York City.
